NEW! FLIP CARDS

The Jinteki Biotech card (⚙ 12) in this data pack is double-faced. The three copies of Jinteki Biotech each have a different version of the card on the back side. The Corp player can build his deck around any one of the copies of Jinteki Biotech–all 3 have the same influence and minimum deck size restrictions–and then use the ability on the front side of the card to swap to a different version of the card from his collection before taking his first turn. There is no influence nor minimum deck size listed on the back sides of the Jinteki Biotech ID, as these values are not used during gameplay.

The back side of a double-faced identity is hidden knowledge, and the Runner cannot look at the back of the card.

By spending ⓘ ⓘ ⓘ, the Corp can flip the front of the ID to its back side. This triggers the ability on the back side of the identity. This is a once-per-game ability, as the Corp cannot choose to flip the ID back to its front.

When swapping IDs, the player can swap back to the original card (in case he is worried that his opponent knows which card he started with).

The Valley

Overview

Biotech Valley (known simply as "the Valley" by most) is the world leader in biotechnology firms and genomic research and home to Jinteki Corporation's flagship American R&D facility, the J-Plex. Its location in the northern SanSan megapolis provides numerous collaboration opportunities with nearby Breaker Bay University. The region is also known for having one of the largest concentrations of Japanese immigrants in the Californias, and the Japanese-Mexican fusion franchise Donburrito originally started as a genengineer's side project serving the Onizuka hopper commuter line.

History

After the Big One, the smaller technology firms that dotted the landscape abandoned the region when their cheap insurance policy payouts could not justify rebuilding.The suddenly cheap and plentiful real estate spurred investment from leading biotech firms in search of a highly educated populace and room to expand. Companies such as Franklin Pharmaceuticals, SyntHex Co., and even a young version of a Japanese company called Jinteki set down roots in this hotspot of opportunity.

The region made a name for itself after the Lunar Insurrection two decades ago. During the War, experimental respirocytes were refined by the Jinteki corporation and introduced by the US military, including the SXC, as part of the medical regimen during Basic. The nanotechnology modifies red blood cells to store and transport over two hundred times more oxygen than normal red blood cells, reducing muscle fatigue and combating the effects of limited oxygen supplies, which was an especially grave concern in space. The technology behind Crimson Dust's green men is also rumored to have come out of the Valley, though Jinteki denies any involvement in the controversial genomic treatment.

Not long after Jinteki announced the commercial viability of vat-grown clones and Satoshi Hiro's promotion to the head of American operations, the other companies in the region began to falter financially. Harmony Medtech was one of the first to fall, and its sale to Jinteki signaled a cascade of acquisitions as the Japanese company bought out the bulk of its competitors in the region, finding new ways to implement the technology their rivals had been developing. Now, Biotech Valley is dominated by Jinteki, and only a handful of smaller firms remain profitable by pursuing the few market niches Jinteki has not yet cornered.
